- 2 I'm quite busy, but I have time to do everything I want.
- 3 I have too much time and not enough things to do.

Read. Whose day is more relaxing?

Day 1

He makes future plans for the next month and makes a to-do list every morning. He plans things in advance to be productive and does some work on his projects. He keeps fit with a short run before breakfast. He stays in in the morning, but he goes out for business meetings in the afternoon. He also goes on a trip to another city for a conference. He has a meal at home quickly in the evening. He has a good time because he finishes all his tasks, but he sometimes comes late for appointments because he is too busy.

Day 2

He wakes up late and has a lie-in. Then he makes future plans for his weekend and makes a to-do list for fun activities. He plans things in advance for his hobbies and does some work, but not much. He keeps fit by walking in the park. He stays in his house most of the day, but he goes out for a short walk. He goes on a trip to a lake near the city. He has an early night after a nice dinner and has a nap in the afternoon. He has a meal at home with his family and has a good time with his friends. He comes late for appointments because he doesn't care what people say about him.

You don't need rest at all!

You are very good at relaxing. You allow yourself to have a lie-in, stay in, or have an early night. You don't overload yourself with plans and you always have a good time. Good job! It's good for your mental health.

5 – 9 points

You need some rest.

You sometimes do some work and make a to-do list, but you already feel some tired! Try to have a nap during the day or have a meal at home slowly. It's also good to go out sometimes and do nothing.

10 – 16 points

You need rest now!!

You work too much and plan everything in advance. You have stress and overwork. You desperately need to go on a trip or at least stay in for a whole day without any to-do lists. Put away your plans and allow yourself to relax for a week!
